

To whom it may concern;

February 21, 2006

I met Larry Johnson in 1976. At that time, I was a young teenager living with my family in Maryland while my father carried out his duties as the assistant to the Peruvian Military Attaché in Washington D.C.

Throughout the years since we met, I have come to think of Larry not only as a man with a big heart and as a good friend; but also as a professional with an impeccable work ethic, an extensive knowledge of immigration law and an uncanny and pragmatic ability to get things done.

Larry has always proven to be effective. I recall back in the early eighties when I tried to get my residence visa while living and working in Houston, Tx. At the time, I had hired a prominent Houston lawyer who, as it turned out, was unable to get me this visa. I contacted Larry then who through great diligence and the right attention to details was able to get my petition for residency approved.

On the personal side, Larry is a good friend, a kind person who is always ready to lend a hand to the less privileged and he is also a devoted family man.

He is that rare individual who believes that helping the less privileged is a cause worth pursuing and who has service to his fellow man deeply embedded among his personal set of values.

I highly recommend Larry to anyone who is ever in need of a good immigration lawyer. He has always been there when I needed him and I have no doubt he will always be there for those who choose to become his clients or for those fortunate few who become his friends.

Sincerely,
